“When we met The One Minutes, it was a period when many of our friends were preparing to leave Guangzhou for short and long term. Therefore, we liked to invite those who often cook, chat, and share food and life at BOLOHO to accomplish the ‘One Minute’ together. It is not only a gift for togetherness but also a blessing for the coming departure.

After the dinner, the group chose a few keywords in casual conversation and talked about their understanding of ‘One Minute’ one fixed shot, and one phrase...

We invited artists and filmmakers all over the world to participate. Along with the tacit understanding that was diverging at all times, we met 38 travelers around the world who found that minute in their journeys and time, making up the series you are watching here.” BOLOHO

When eating jackfruit, people often throw away its center, not knowing that it can also be enjoyed as its own special delicacy. The name BOLOHO is a Cantonese romanization of the Chinese word for ‘jackfruit core’, and it is from the crevices of an old residential neighborhood in the core of the Guangzhou megalopolis where BOLOHO Collective began in 2019.

BOLOHO was initiated by two family women working away from home; a business venture and a place to get some fresh air where they could sort out their lives and work. In three years, the project developed into a 'company' platform based on the principles of self-discipline, equality and mutual-aid, providing work for collaborators as well as friends like them who cannot make a living from art alone. BOLOHO also allows them to better understand how to live and work communally when taking jobs together, and provides the opportunity to think about, discern and solve some of the real issues that we all face. BOLOHO participated in documenta fifteen.

For 2023, The One Minutes will create a globally oriented program, focused on solidarity, collectivity and equal allocation, with which we want to make more voices heard.

Using the forces of video, The One Minutes wants to contribute to creating spaces for free expression, collective imagination, and global solidarity in our different, yet deeply interconnected realities.

Every two months, The One Minutes releases a new series of one-minute films exploring our current time in moving images. Museums and cultural organisations around the world subscribe to the series.

Send in your videos and participate in the project!
